Leven “Chuck” Wilson is a mental health professional, social worker, author, publisher, philanthropist, speaker, music artist, songwriter, and change agent whose work spans mental wellness, leadership, education, community engagement, and creative expression. He is also the creator of Good News, a daily inspirational message reaching hundreds of thousands of people worldwide. With roots in North Carolina and academic credentials from the University of Hawaii at Manoa and Oxford Graduate School, Chuck has built his career around empowering people, strengthening communities, and creating meaningful change.

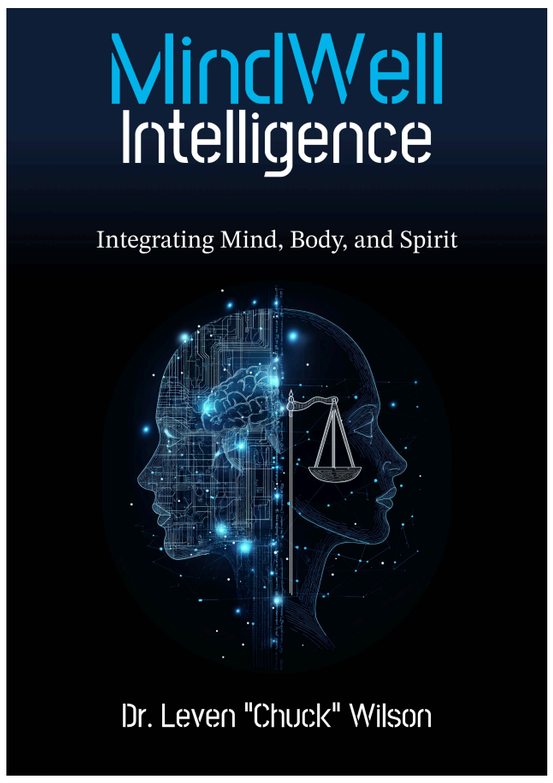

Throughout his career, Chuck has addressed complex social and community challenges including mental health, gang and domestic violence, crisis response, natural disasters, youth literacy, social justice, and civil rights. His experience as a therapist, trainer, facilitator, and consultant has extended across education, labor, nonprofit, government, and professional organizations, including work with the NFL’s Carolina Panthers and Steve Harvey’s Boys Mentoring Program.

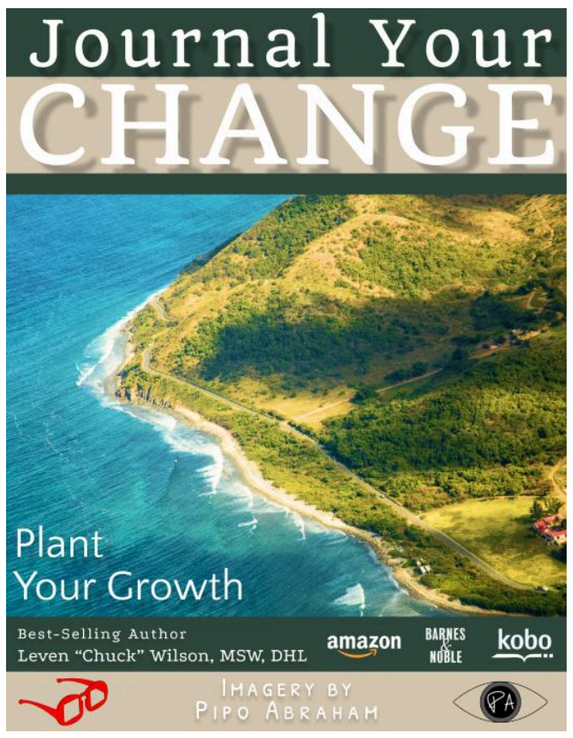

At the University of Hawaii at Manoa, Chuck served as a principal investigator on three grants, including work supported by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and was twice recognized by the Hawaii State Senate and House of Representatives for his contributions to the state. At Pasco-Hernando State College, he led leadership development, diversity initiatives, and community partnerships. Through the American Federation of Teachers, Chuck helped expand mental health, wellness, and well-being initiatives serving 1.2 million members while providing training, workshops, and support across the country.

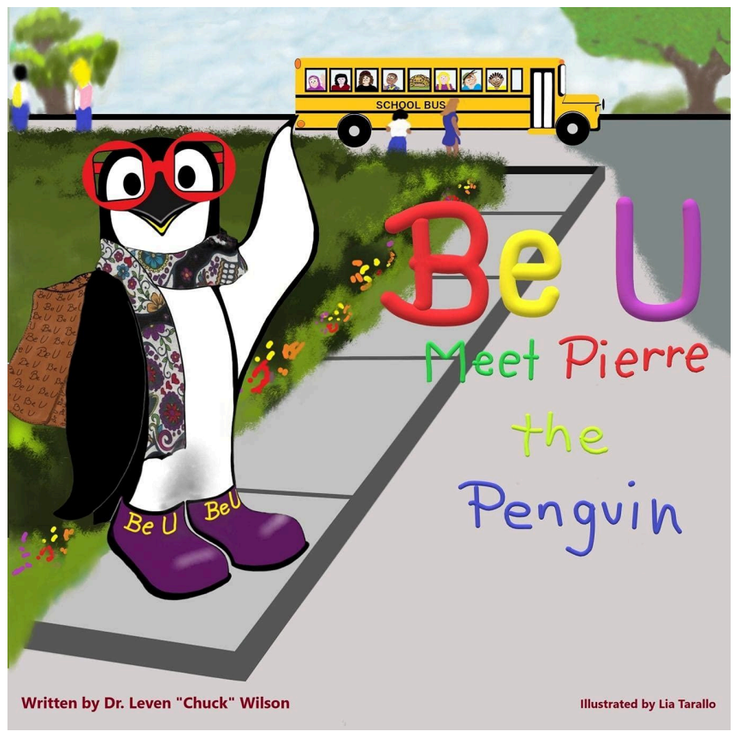

Chuck has also supported the Department of Defense Special Operations Acquisitions, Technology, and Logistics community and the United States Special Operations Command as a trainer and workshop facilitator. Beyond his professional work, he extends his message through books, music, songwriting, speaking, podcasts, and creative media, using each platform to advance hope, resilience, connection, and human potential.

Nan, Inc.

And the School of Social Work

Nan News is Good News

Nan, Inc. and the School of Social Work Make a Difference

By Sandra Kim

The students and faculty at the Myron B. Thompson School of Social Work at the University of Hawaii at Manoa are all too familiar with the need to help struggling Hawai'i residents, and Nan, Inc. has always made giving back to the community a regular part of the company's practice.

It all started in the Spring of 2005 when Masters in Social Work student, Leven "Chuck" Wilson, was assigned a practicum placement at Adult Protective Services. With a background in business, Chuck was driven with an idea to help his client who was incapacitated and facing foreclosure of her neglected home.

"It just didn't make sense to me to see this person...lose everything because of circumstances beyond her control," said Chuck.

Working with his practicum instructor, Lei Shimizu, Chuck met with the City and County of Honolulu and State officials, but neither were in a position to help. Although he knew it was a long shot, Chuck decided to look online for a local construction company that could save his client's home. The first company he called was Nan, Inc. and to Chuck's surprise, Nan, Inc. told him, "yes".

Nan, Inc. started work on the nearly-condemned home in March 2007. Since then, Nan, Inc., with donations from other generous companies, spent over $130,000 to completely rebuild the home at no cost to the home-owner.

"When we were approached by Chuck, it was clear that it was the right thing to do. We also encouraged our young engineers to get involved to learn that you must first give in life before you receive," said Fooney Freestone, President of Nan, Inc., who also sacrificed his weekends with numerous volunteers at the construction site.

Nan, Inc. rallied other companies, such as Mason Architects, Inc. and Paradise Landscaping Maintenance Company, to get involved. Other companies made generous donations in services and supplies and a group of willing volunteers from Trinity Missionary Baptist Church showed up to help.

"This was an ohana bailout," said Chuck. "We were able to keep this person in her home and her house out of foreclosure. I was able to define "aloha" through this project—it was about a group of people with only an idea coming together to help someone in need without expecting anything in return."

Nan, Inc. Vice-President Ryan Nakaima said, "During these tough economic times, I hope this story raises awareness about our neighbors in need and inspires those in a position to help to get involved and make a difference."

Nan, Inc., a local construction company, partnered with the Myron B. Thompson School of Social Work at the University of Manoa to help a struggling homeowner facing foreclosure. Chuck Wilson, a social work student, initiated the project after discovering his client's dire situation. Nan, Inc. generously rebuilt the home at no cost to the homeowner, with donations and volunteer efforts from other companies and community members. This collaborative effort not only saved the homeowner from foreclosure but also exemplified the spirit of aloha, demonstrating how a community can come together to help those in need.
